FOR SALE-BUSINESS.

A SUNDAY SKIRMISH.

A Well Attended Union Temperance

Meeting at the Opera House.

THE CAMPAIGN IS FAIRLY OPENED Moral Sussion and the Constitutional Amendment Advocated.

MANY GOOD SPEAKERS ARE PRESENT

Bow after row (pronounced with the long sound of the "o") of seated spectators, with an accompanying fringe standing in the rear, filled the Opera House last evening. It was the second meeting of the series which are to be held in this theater. Mr. J. W. Moreland appeared in the leading role and was ably supported by a picked company, including one funny comedian, and an enlarged and magnificent chorus. An organ was buried somewhere beneath

The opening hymn was finished, and Mr. John M. Bailey was introduced to make a few remarks. In his address he told several FRED H. EGGERS. 172 Ohio street. F. H. EGGERS & SON, Ohio and Chestnut sts. anecdotes bearing upon the question. His address was otherwise short. He said:

It may seem somewhat novel, this discussion of political themes on the Sabbath. This cause s vital, though, to the best interests of those whom we love. I defy any man to separate the cause of temperance from that of religion. I think we are perfectly justifiable in discussing temperance on the Sabbath day. For the past 50 years we have been carrying on the operance work like men in a muddy river We now propose to go to the source of this river, and remove the cause. We want some self-sacrifice in this business. We have to give our best efforts, time and money in this

A VERY SUDDEN CONVERSION.

Guard against the insidious arguments of the enemy. It is not a strange thing how quickly the salconkeepers have been converted to high license? A few months ago they were oppos-ing this very same high license. More money has been spent in the past campaign than would convert China, This word of warning I wish to give to you in regard to their arguments: 'Just beware of snakes.' They do not put forth one argument that does not contain a snake.

When the speaker had concluded, there was general applause, and the boys in the gallery became very enthusiastic, and ap-plauded him very heartily. He did not respond to the encore, however. Rev. J. B. Koehne was introduced, and the noise in the gallery continued. He re-lated an experience he had in Washington last week, when a man had asked him to step around the corner out of the rain and step around the corner out of the rain and take a drink. Dr. Bullen here introduced an audible "Yes," which rather disconcerted the speaker, and caused a laugh in the audience. His assent was given at just about the time the man invited would have given his, only he did not; but it seconded realistic enough. Bey Mr. but it sounded realistic enough. Rev. Mr. Koehne gave a little more of his experience with water in Washington, which, many visitors at the capital assert, was so common that it was found in the very whisky that Mr. Koehne refused. Continuing, he described the fascinating barkeepers of Pittsburg. Dr. Bullen again approved and gave a hearty approval of the description. The speaker then waxed sarcastic, and deseribed a Pittsburg detective's murder, and said a jury was afraid to hang a man in this

He said he once lived in a town which had a magnificent Council like Pittsburg's, who persisted in passing foolish laws, and allowed the liquor seller to escape.

Dr. Harry Bullen met with an enthusiastic reception from both the parquet and the gallery gods. He prefaced his remarks by gallery gous. He prefaced his remarks by saying: "I am right here, boys!" "Get out of there, then!" said a voice in the gallery, which sounded as musicabas a solocplayed on a file and a piece of steel. "I have been WANTED-MORTGAGES ON CITY PROPon a nic and a piece of seet. I have been right there for 30 years, boys," said the doctor, more seriously. "This tells it. Last Monday night I promised you a nice speech. [Some voice in gallery: "That's what!"] Now here it is: We want some money. I want to raise $100 in five minutes. I am going to send the ushers through the audience with baskets, and want $100." At the conclusion of his remarks the cry was raised, "Hurrah for Dr. Bullen," by the boys. The ushers then proceeded to collect the $100.

Mr. Joseph R. Hunter was introduced. and said he was in favor of paying saloon ceepers and manufacturers for damages, if the law gave them the right to sell liquor. He then advanced several arguments in Captain J. K. Barbour then proceeded to tell the audience what a wonderful difference there was in him since he had quit drinking and how he had improved. Invitations were extended to pledge-signers when he concluded, and there were several responses. The audience dispersed when the choir had sung another hymn,
